"I taste in Afrikaans and argue in English, but if I swear I go back to Afrikaans again." Thus speaks Tannie Maria, the agony aunt heroine of this murder mystery set in Ladismith in the Klein Karoo in South Africa. This looks like cosy crime—and it is both funny and sweet—but it has a hard edge and doesn't skirt the difficult subjects of South Africa's history or the region's huge problem with domestic violence. It's a culinary and linguistic treat too, packed with recipes and smatterings of Afrikaans. And I finally understand what fracking is.
